Furano's Topography

Furano City lies in the heart of a valley, near the center of Hokkaido, surrounded by many mountains. Looking east you can see Mt. Tokachi, which sits amongst the Daisetsuzan Mountain Range. Looking west you can see the Yubari Mountain Range, which includes Mt. Ashibetsu. And to the south lies a sea of large trees (many of which are more than 100 years old), which are part of Tokyo University's research forest. Furano City is surrounded by lush woodlands, and the entire Furano region is almost 70% wilderness.

Furano's Climate

Furano City has an inland climate and you can feel a pronounced difference between the four seasons. Snow begins to fall around the middle of November and continues falling through early April. The temperature can get as low as -28°C (-18°F) which helps give the Furano ski slopes some of the best quality powder in the world. In winter Furano becomes an international resort with lots of skiers and snowboarders coming from all over the world. Between July and August the temperature occasionally rises to over 30°C (86°F) in the afternoon, but early morning and late evening it's nice and cool, making summer a pleasant time to visit.

 Asahigaoka Park was selected as one of the 100 most beautiful scenic areas in Japan, and can be enjoyed in any season. In winter, the roads are closed to traffic and the park is transformed into a top-notch cross-country ski course.

New Shikoku 88 Stone Buddhas
 Taking after the famous 88 stone buddha statues located on Shikoku Island in Eastern Japan, Furano is also home to an equivalent number of Buddha statues. The first statue can be found at the Furano Temple and the remaining 87 statues are visible from the walking paths in Asahigaoka Park. In mid-May, as many as 3000 cherry blossom trees bloom in the park. The park also offers spectacular views of downtown Furano and Mt. Tokachi-dake.
